*"We want to be close to our clients and,
by promoting high-quality Italian wine,
we are endeavouring to spread our country's culture."*

HISTORY

It was Saint Valentine's Day 1950. 121 winegrowers from the parishes of Breganze gathered to pool their passion and work. The result was the founding of a co-operative cellar. They needed a name, and seeing as the benevolence of the Holy Father in agriculture can do no harm, they decided to name it in honor of their most important fellow-citizen: Blessed Bartholomew of Breganze, a Dominican friar and Bishop of Vicenza in the thirteenth century.

After initial scepticism had been allayed, more growers, convinced that the idea was a good one, joined the founder members. A Ministerial Decree dated 18th July 1968 awarded Denominazione di Origine Controllata status to Breganze wines: this was a definite leap forward in quality which opened up national and foreign markets for products from Breganze. In 1970 a new ageing and bottling facility was inaugurated, the result of great technical and financial commitment for that time, equipped with an barrel cellar 15 metres underground.

Further renovation work was carried out in 1998 with reconstruction of the east wing of the Cellar.

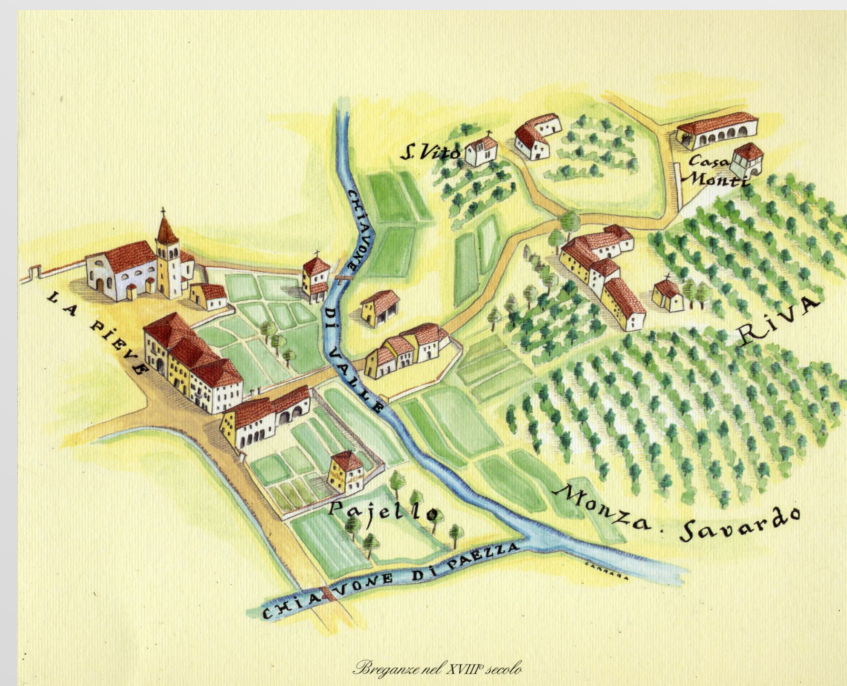

TERRITORY

The DOC area of Breganze extends from the foot of the Alps along a band of hills ranging from the Medieval towns, 50 Km north of the City of Venice. Gentle hills striped with rows of vines, embellished in spring by the cherry trees in blossom and framed by a backdrop of rugged mountains.

Here where Andrea Palladio built some of his most beautiful villas, the vine has been cultivated for more than one thousand years to produce wonderful, high quality wines.

FUNDAMENTAL STRENGTHS

Today the fundamental strengths on which Cantina Beato Bartolomeo is based are:

1

the tradition of a long history, going back almost sixty years

2

the innovation guaranteed by a constant quest for higher quality in the vineyard, in the winery and in the marketing and sales department the company's attention towards practising ever more ecologically sustainable viticulture. Indeed by operating strategies and production techniques that are decidedly "green", is perfecting an integrated process that keeps three fundamental factors in mind: every action that is put into effect must be safe for the environment, socially equitable and feasible from a financial point of view.

3

4

to reach certain important goals some of which have already been attained and others of which are in the process of being so – and it is doing this through key elements such as soil, terroir, and energy.

THE SOLAR PANELS

70% of the roofs are covered by solar panels.

Cantina Beato Bartolomeo is aiming to become completely self-sufficient from an energy point of view. Even now we produce up to 30% of our individual needs by resorting to (“clean”) solar energy. The Winery is situated in particularly attractive landscapes, so the panels have been positioned on the roofs of farm buildings or of the wineries so as to reduce their visual impact almost totally.
